About This Game

12 orbits is the only local multiplayer game for 2-12 people at once, no matter what you play on. If you can read this, be it on a PC, a laptop or even a tablet, you probably have everything you need. Additional controllers are supported, but not required unless you prefer to have a little more elbow room.

The game can be set up in seconds, even for 12 players at once. Rounds take about 5 minutes each. 12 orbits is friendly, competitive and a little chaotic. It is simple enough to quickly teach a group how to play it, but varied and deep enough to keep them entertained for a long time.

You can choose from 4 game modes, two of them for teams, with each one focused on a different playstyle. All of them adjust to any number of players from 2 - 12, so you can start small and add players as they come along.

Game Modes

▶ Arena

Fill the arena with spheres of your own color and avoid those of your opponents. A bullet hell game that constantly grows more intense.

▶ Multiball (Teams)

Kind of like football, but with exploding goals and multiple balls at once, which change color all the time.

▶ Trails

Collect spheres to grow longer than your opponents. Then block their path and pay attention to your own. And should the other players try to keep their distance, just fling your spheres at them.

▶ Blizzard (Teams)

Defend against a whole shower of spheres at once, and send them right back where they came from.

FAQ

My keyboard / touchscreen supports only 3 – 5 inputs at a time.

Will this even work?

Yes! 12 orbits needs only one button per player, and never requires button mashing or keeping that button pressed down. This makes it highly unlikely for too many buttons to ever be pressed during the same frame, even with 12 players at once.

There is only partial controller support. Does this mean I cannot play from my couch / in Big Picture Mode?

The game can be controlled entirely with a gamepad. But you will have to press Enter once to skip the launcher, that's why I cannot say it has full controller support. Sorry about that.

Is there a colorblind mode?

Yes. It is based on black and white symbols, so it should work for any type of color blindness.

Since this is a one-button game, does it also support One Switch inputs?

Yes, including the menus. More information on this can be found here

Multiple game modes, fun with friends, easy to learn (3 minutes) not so easy to master with a considerable skill ceiling. Original gameplay, low price. EASY RECOMMEND!. The best party game i've ever owned. Very simple idea and a great game for families or a bunch of friends - upto 12 players. You just need a keyboard and/or 1-2 controllers. Very difficult to not say "just one more game?". I had a blast playing this and played more than I expected to when I bought it. For only 2 euros this should definetly be on your list to do things if you're bored and have some friends over, or even by yourself.. This is simply a brilliant game. The more people you have to join, the better. I had 6 people crowding around a small keyboard trying to press their keys! Super fun.

I wish I had friends to play this with :(

It's still fun to play alone though, theres many challenging achievements to try to earn in practice mode, and its a good game to play if you just want to zone out because it's so simple.. Great Game! (If you have friends.). very fun game to play with friends this game is simple but it requires precision and planning. Because of the easy controls and the amount of players it supports I can play with friends at school doesn't usually play games. And they also enjoy it! But try to fit 12 people in front of the same keyboard; we struggled with only 6.... Fill your room with laughter and joy with this simple and exciting game!. It's a fun game to play with friends.
